

Public Allies' MacArthur Antigua named 2010 American Express NGen Fellow

We'd like to share some exciting news with you. MacArthur Antigua, Director of National Recruitment and Expansion at Public Allies, has been selected as one of 12 American Express NGen Fellows.

The American Express NGen Fellows Program honors leaders under age 40 who are at Independent Sector member organizations. It is the second year of this program and the second year that Public Allies is represented. Last year David McKinney, Public Allies Vice President of Programs, was an NGen Fellow.

Mac brings tremendous energy, creativity, talent and experience to our organization, and has made an impact here in many ways. We are sure he'll bring more of the same to the American Express NGen Fellows Program.

Mac started out as an Ally in the Chicago class of 1997. He returned to serve as Chicago's Program Director from 1999 to 2003, and in 2005 he led the development of Turning The Tide, an AmeriCorps Professional Corps/human services fellowship jointly managed by Public Allies and the Alliance for Children and Families. He has been in his current role since October 2008.

The American Express NGen Fellows Program is part of an Independent Sector initiative called NGen: Moving Nonprofit Leaders from Next to Now. Its aim is to build the next generation of nonprofit and philanthropic leaders. As a fellow, Mac will collaborate with other emerging voices, interact with seasoned leaders, and contribute to discussions about the challenges facing the nonprofit and philanthropic community. Along with the other fellows, he'll also embark on a keystone project.

Please join us in congratulating Mac on this achievement!

Sincerely,

Paul Schmitz, CEO, and Cris Ros-Dukler, COO, Public Allies
